Chapter 1 by MasterofAll_

Prologue

The world was destroyed. Dead as dust. The War changed everything. It was all barren now. The majority of the things that had inhabited were space Parasytes, aliens, and more. But, what no one knew, was that deep under the crust, 12,000 feet down, there was a lab. It appeared to be abandoned. Vines grew over pods with embryo-like creatures growing inside. One of them opened its eyes and looked around.

Chapter 2 by Marouk

Long forgotten, deep sitting instinct made it gasp for air. Unaware of anything, it soaked a thick liquid into the lungs and a weird panic set in. Something sent a small shock through its spine and limbs and the creature began shaking, but then relaxed. As the shock subsided it made an effort to push out the liquid out of the lungs.

There it was, something new, something that thinks, or at least swallows all that it sees through the blurry liquid into its infantile consciousness; a clean piece of paper that started its first letter. Dark red ink, like the juice in its veins and like the pain it felt from the first moment it opened the eyes.

Chapter 3 by Wilman Fathurochman

It continued exploring its surroundings, trying to make reasoning.

"What is this? What is that?" It thought.

It crawled to other pods wondering why was he the only one awake. No, why was he the only one alive.
